STONE CUTTERS' MALLET.

Our STONE CUTTERS' MALLETs are made of the best material. Having tried the different Hickory of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and other States, we have found the Hickory of Long Island the very best for our purpose; therefore, we can say, that in the last twenty years, no manufacturer has been able to come up to our standard in the manufacture of Mallets, Handles, &c.

OUR PATENTED COTTON & BALE HOOKS

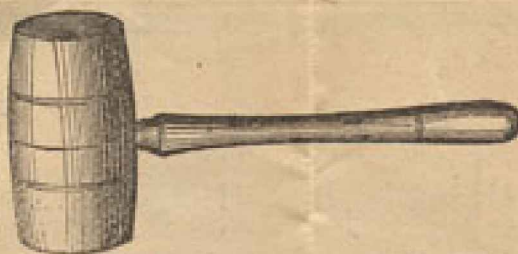

A in the drawing represents a Bale Hook and Box Hook of Cast Steel, and B the Wooden Handle of the same, which is secured by a socket hole to the shank end of the hook, and rigidly secured by a cross pin or key C, that is passed through a longitudinal hole a of the handle, and an eye b of the shank end of the hook, as shown in figs 1 and 2.

For being shipped the handle may be readily detached from the hook by withdrawing the key, which allows a more compact packing of the hook.

THE No. 2 Hooks—The driving in of the key into the part of the handle back of the shank forms a sufficiently strong connection. Thus a very strong and superior connection of the shank end of the hook with handle and key is obtained that will resist any strain without loosening the handle or splitting the same, or injuring the hand by the rivet end of the shank of the old style.
